The UK voted to leave the European Union (EU), shaking a key political arrangement of the Western world and upsetting markets. Volatility spiked in June, resulting in steep losses for the British Pound and many European equities, while bond yields decreased even further into negative territory. In commodities, precious metals surged on Brexit with sharp gains in gold while agricultural posted declines. The currency market was characterized by the sharp sell-off in the British Pound. In addition, US Dollar and especially Japanese Yen surged against the Euro as investors' risk aversion increased.

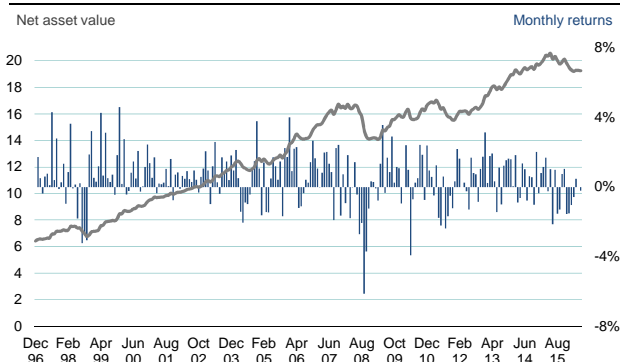

The portfolio protected the downside and ended the month with a slightly negative result with high dispersion amongst the different style and manager returns. The most significant positive contribution came from CTAs, which booked gains in bonds and currencies, whereby the short in the British Pound was a key trade. Event Driven and Relative Value were slightly positive and added to performance. Within the Global Macro allocation, best results came from a manager focusing on commodities offsetting the moderate losses of other managers. Long/Short Equity strategies had mixed results and were down as a group with the largest deductions from Japan exposure.
