In September, global financial markets were mixed as continued strong economic indicators in the US enabled a further rate increase while other markets were impacted by fresh uncertainty from trade worries with Canada and China. Rates trended higher throughout the month and the US Dollar appreciated against most currencies except for the British Pound. Commodities generally traded higher, led by energy and most metals while agricultures traded in a wide range.

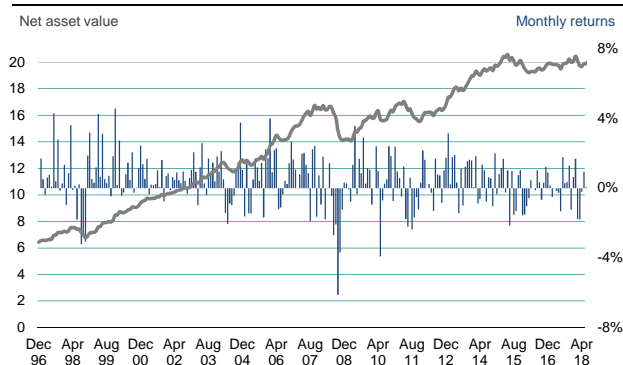

The portfolio ended the month in negative territory with deductions across most styles. The majority of Long/Short Equity managers incurred losses with the largest deduction stemming from the Asia allocation. CTAs also had a difficult month with deductions mainly from trend-following, short-term traders, while quantitative macro strategies offered some diversification benefits. Relative Value managers had mixed results leading to a marginal deduction. Event Driven managers were positive in both Europe and US, thus helping to support portfolio performance.

Style allocation as of 30 September 2018 (26 Holdings)
