Central banks' indications of a potential policy normalization impacted bonds, equities and FX markets in June. Developed market bonds were down for the month, with 10-year yields increasing by 10bps or more in Germany, UK and the US. The dollar retraced against a stronger EUR and GBP, which weighed negatively on the corresponding equity indices in Europe and in the UK. In the US, the S&P 500 closed in positive territory while technology stocks suffered on valuations concern. In Asia, Chinese and Japanese markets were positive. Within commodities, both oil and natural gas fell while agricultural commodities gained driven by concerning weather forecasts.

The portfolio ended the month in negative territory, with most strategies detracting from performance and only Relative Value offering some downside protection. CTAs generated the largest losses, which were accumulated across asset classes. The largest deduction stemmed from fixed income, where long bond positions were impacted by market reversals. Within Long/Short Equity, Asian managers posted gains which were eroded across other geographies. Event Driven managers ended the month in negative territory in both Europe and the US. Global Macro managers faced a challenging environment and commodities trading proved particularly difficult.

Disclaimer

* The NAV of the latest month alone is an estimate. The final NAV will be communicated separately once determined. Please note the above NAV estimate is after estimated costs and fees. This valuation, which has been prepared in good faith by the Company's Administrator and Investment Adviser, is for information purposes only and is based on the unaudited estimated valuations supplied to the Company's Investment Adviser by investee funds, their managers, investment advisers or administrators. When finally determined, the actual month end Net Asset Value may therefore be materially different from this estimated value. Accordingly, no reliance should be placed on such estimated Net Asset Value and it should only be taken as an indicative guide.
